Ethiopia volcano ash disrupts many flights, govt says no cause for concern

DEEPAK PATEL
New Delhi, 25 November

- Delhi airport saw 7 cancellations and 12 delays on Tuesday
- An IndiGo flight was diverted to Ahmedabad due to the ash cloud
- MoCA said operations remained smooth with only minor rerouting
- AAI issued NOTAMs; ATCs, IMD and airlines are coordinating
- DGCA ordered airlines to follow volcanic-ash procedures

Ethiopian volcano ash continued to impact the airspace on Tuesday, with several flight cancellations, rerouting, and delays. Aviation authorities in the country, however, assured flyers that there was no cause for concern at the moment, adding there was seamless coordination between air traffic controllers, India Meteorological Department, airlines, and international aviation agencies.

Air India had to cancel some 13 flights, including on international routes, since Monday as it was carrying out precautionary checks on aircraft that flew over regions potentially affected by volcanic ash from Ethiopia. Akasa also said it had cancelled some scheduled flights to destinations in West Asia. IndiGo's Kannur-Abu Dhabi flight 6E1433 was diverted to Ahmedabad on Monday due to the ash cloud.

Hayli Gubbi volcano, located in Ethiopia's Afar Rift, erupted on Sunday for the first time in more than 10,000 years, spewing a dense ash plume up to 45,000 feet. The cloud drifted northeast at 100-120 kilometre per hour (kmph), and entered the Indian airspace on Monday evening.

On Tuesday afternoon, the IMD said in a statement that the ash cloud was moving towards China. The cloud was expected to move out of the Indian skies by late evening.

Through the day, Delhi airport saw seven international flight cancellations and 12 delays between 1 AM and 6 PM owing to the ash cloud drifting eastward, according to an aviation source.

In a statement, the Ministry of Civil Aviation said flight operations across India remained smooth with "only a few flights rerouted or descended as a precaution".

Air India posted on X (formerly Twitter) that it had cancelled AI 106 (Newark-Delhi), AI 102 (New York-Delhi), AI 2204 (Dubai-Hyderabad), AI 2290 (Doha-Mumbai), AI 2212 (Dubai-Chennai), AI 2250 (Dammam-Mumbai) and AI 2284 (Doha-Delhi) on Monday. For Tuesday, the airline cancelled AI 2822 (Chennai-Mumbai), AI 2466 (Hyderabad-Delhi), AI 2444/2445 (Mumbai-Hyderabad-Mumbai) and AI 2471/2472 (Mumbai-Kolkata-Mumbai).

The airline said its ground teams across the network were keeping passengers updated and providing immediate assistance, including hotel accommodation. AI said it was making "every effort to arrange alternative travel at the earliest", adding that the safety of its passengers and crew members remained its highest priority.

The Airports Authority of India (AAI) — which manages the ATCs — has issued the necessary notice to airmen (NOTAM) and all affected flights have been kept informed, the civil aviation ministry noted.

"Operations across India remain smooth, with only a few flights rerouted or descended as a precaution. There is no cause for concern at this moment. We continue to monitor the situation closely and will provide timely updates to ensure passenger safety," it added.

On Monday, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation had directed airlines to adjust flight planning and fuel intake and to "strictly" avoid ash-affected regions and altitudes.

In its directive, the aviation regulator had said airlines must ensure that flight crew and aircraft engineers follow the prescribed procedures for operations in and around volcanic ash. "Airlines must maintain continuous monitoring of the situation. Any suspected ash encounter must be immediately reported," the DGCA had said.

As for the volcano ash, it had covered parts of Pakistan and northern India after crossing Yemen and Oman on Tuesday, news agencies reported, quoting Flightradar24, a flight tracking website.

OpenAI turns ChatGPT into personal shopping scout

- Users can describe what they need, and the assistant will ask questions and research products across sites
- It creates a personalised buyer's guide with user choices, past interactions
- The feature is rolling out on mobile and web for all logged-in users across Free, Go, Plus and Pro plans
- Nearly unlimited usage is available through the holidays

AASHISH ARYAN
New Delhi, 25 November

OpenAI on Tuesday launched a shopping research feature in its flagship chatbot, ChatGPT, which can help users find the right products by describing the product or the event for which they want to purchase it, the company said in a blog post.

The research assistant will ask users questions about the product they want to buy, research it across various websites, and help deliver a personalised buyer's guide. The research feature will also build on users' past interactions with ChatGPT to understand which products they like, the company said.

"Shopping research is starting to roll out today (Tuesday) on mobile and web for logged-in ChatGPT users on Free, Go, Plus, and Pro plans. To help with holiday shopping, we're making nearly unlimited usage available to all plans through the holidays," OpenAI said.

Earlier this year, in April, OpenAI rolled out a feature in ChatGPT that allowed users to search, compare, and buy products by providing personalised recommendations, visual details of the product they are looking for, the price, and a direct link to buy it.

The company had then said that the memory integration feature for search and shopping, which allows ChatGPT to build on previous conversations that a user has had with the bot, was also available for all users.

In February 2024, OpenAI said it was "testing the ability for ChatGPT to remember things you discuss to make future chats more helpful".

The idea, OpenAI had said, was to save users "from having to repeat information" so that future conversations with the chatbot would be more useful. The memory feature was rolled out to all users in September that year.

In an update on April 10 this year, OpenAI said that ChatGPT's memory was now comprehensive, as the large language model could, in addition to user-saved memories, also reference past conversations between the chatbot and the user to deliver more personalised responses.

In the update on Tuesday, OpenAI said that the shopping research feature would enable deeper decision-making conversations between the user and the chatbot.

"It performs especially well in detail-heavy categories like electronics, beauty, home and garden, kitchen and appliances, and sports and outdoor," OpenAI said.

Lord's Mark Industries Limited., a diversified healthcare and technology-led group, announced the acquisition of an 85% stake in Renalyx Health Systems Private Limited, the Bengaluru-based med-tech innovator behind India's first fully indigenous, AI- and cloud-enabled smart hemodialysis machine. Renalyx would be the R&D arm for Lords Mark Industries to continue research in more medical devices related to the kidney and liver.

The acquisition marks a decisive step in Lord's Mark Industries' expansion into next-generation medical technologies that address India's growing burden of chronic kidney disease (CKD). Renalyx's flagship hemodialysis machine integrates real-time remote monitoring, cloud-based clinical connectivity, and intelligent analytics, enabling hospitals, dialysis centres, and clinicians to deliver safer, more reliable, and more cost-efficient renal therapy.

With Renalyx now part of its healthcare ecosystem, Lord's Mark Industries Ltd. is well-positioned to scale its indigenous dialysis infrastructure, enhance clinical outcomes, and expand access to quality renal care across Tier 1 to Tier 3 markets.

Commenting on the acquisition, Sachidanand Upadhyay, Managing Director, Lord's Mark Industries Ltd., said: "Our investment in Renalyx is a forward-looking bet on the future of Indian healthcare, one where cutting-edge med-tech is designed, engineered, and manufactured in India for India and the world. Dialysis must move from being a high-cost, infrastructure-heavy service to a smart, connected, and patient-centric experience. By bringing Renalyx into our fold, we are accelerating that shift. We see this as a transformative opportunity to democratise advanced renal care, strengthen Make in India innovation, and build medical technologies that redefine accessibility and clinical excellence at scale."

Renalyx will continue to operate with its existing engineering and product teams, while leveraging Lord's Mark Industries' national healthcare distribution, diagnostics network, and manufacturing capabilities to drive faster market penetration and technology adoption.

Incorporated in 1998, Lord's Mark Industries Ltd. has emerged as a dynamic force in the healthcare and diagnostics sector. Building on a strong legacy of innovation, the company has strategically expanded into medical diagnostics, establishing a robust presence across the healthcare value chain.
